

Jalen Troy THE 6TH GRADE ODYSSEY

O' dear Muse, please speak to my hand to tell the people my story.

One young man stood tall and broad as the long year and seasons brought with it 6th grade dangers, Jalen of Troy.

The autumn season brought our fearless hero his first test of the year: the need to make peace with an ancient Chinese warring state and lead them to victory over opposing threats.

The Great Jalen of Troy failed and was left in the desert, starving and thirsting.

Leading the Mongols, Jalen attacked China from the Gobi desert and founded the Empire of the Hun.

The winter brought our hero his second test of the year: the need to escape the Fair O' Science.

The Great Jalen of Troy entered and was surrounded by bouncing basketballs, flying rocket missiles, exploding volcanoes, and zooming Nerf darts.

The Great Jalen of Troy survived all opponents, and succeeded triumphantly.

The winter season hit him yet again with his third test of the year:

He would need to lead his team to victory in zombie tag, capture the flag, and other athletic competitions.

But the others did not go down without a fight.

With many bruises and scars, Jalen was victorious yet again.

The spring season brought our hero his fourth and final challenge of the year.

He needed to build a rocket powered by water and air.

Jalen's rocket flew so high, it brushed the sun and when it came down, it made a huge crater in the ground.

As summer approached, The Great Jalen of Troy had triumphed over all of the challenges 6th grade could throw at him.

As long as there are Science Fairs, rockets, and sports, his fame will live on.